Hi Merle,

Acupuncture as I understand it maybe learned while in podiatric medical school, during the residency period, or CME. Podiatric physicians have been using needles forever. Does your Board want me to tell my Board that your agency believes that there is not concurrent jurisdiction for acupuncture and that they believe that only they can safely practice acupuncture? Does your Board believe that only they can use acupuncture? Please provide the statutory authority for this proprietary belief which clearly states that only OM can use acupuncture to the exclusion of all other practitioners. Is your Board aware that rehab physicians use acupuncture? Please advise.

Many thanks and have a good weekend,

Carolyn
